Total Cholesterol	mg/dL	228	< 200	High
Serum Creatinine	mg/dL	1	0.7 – 1.2	Normal
Fasting Glucose	mg/dL	102	70 – 99	High

Lab Report Summary

	Low Hemoglobin (11.8 g/dL) - reduced oxygen carrying capacity (possible anaemia)
	Low MCV (76 fL) - smaller than normal red blood cells (linked to iron deficiency)
	High Total Cholesterol (228 mg/dL) - Increased risk of heart related conditions (dyslipidemia)
	High TSH (5.1 μIU/mL) - underactive thyroid function (hypothyroid tendency)
	Borderline High Fasting Glucose (102 mg/dL)- early blood sugar imbalance (prediabetic tendency)

Lab Report Conclusion

The results show mild to moderate abnormalities indicating a metabolic or nutritional imbalance, but no serious or immediate concern. Regular monitoring and lifestyle changes are recommended to reduce long-term risks.

Radiology Results

Test Name	Findings	Impression	Severity
Pelvis X-Ray / CT Pelvis	Heart valves are normal with proper blood flow. The sizes of the heart chambers are normal. Left ventricular systolic function is normal. No increase in pulmonary artery pressure.	Healed pelvic fractures – post severe polytrauma. Chronic post-traumatic skeletal changes.	Moderate
Chest X-Ray	No active lung consolidation. Linear fibrotic bands noted in right lower zone (post-traumatic / post-inflammatory) Cardiac silhouette mildly enlarged.	Post-traumatic fibrotic changes. Mild cardiomegaly (likely related to hypertension)	Mild

Radiology Report Summary

	Heart valves and blood flow are normal with no functional issues detected.	✓
	Heart chambers are normal in size and pumping function is working well.	✓
	Old pelvic fractures have healed but some long-term bone changes remain.	✓
	No high lung pressure or active infection (like pneumonia) is seen; only minor scarring in the lower right lung, likely from a past issue.	✓
	The heart appears slightly enlarged, possibly due to high blood pressure .	⚠

Radiology Report Conclusion

The reports show no active or serious disease in the heart or lungs. Findings mainly reflect past injuries with no current complications. The slightly enlarged heart should be monitored. Overall condition is stable with no urgent concerns.
